STILL CRITICAL.

The crisis Washington to-day, though of a slightly more hopeful character, is not such as to give any ground for believing that the crisis in the president's case is being safely passed. The bulletins of the physicians, too, it must be borne in mind, are not to be taken as meaning exactly what their language would imply. The morning bulletin, for example, states that "the president passed a tranquil night, sleeping most of the time," but it does not say that his tranquil slumbers were produced by the use of opium, which it is almost certain was the fact. The bulletin also fails to state that no nourishment was taken into the stomach, but speaks of the administration of "nutritive enemas," which means that the patient's stomach is not yet in condition to retain food of any kind. The bulletin does not furnish much to dispel the gloom that has settled over the land like a funeral pall.

THE Review did not have much news from Washington this morning, but it communicated that by lively skirmishing it had unearthed a scandal affecting the business integrity of General S. H. Russell, of Texas, who made a Republican speech in Decatur last fall. We do not know what Gen. Russell said of the story may be, but presume that he has some reasons for his action in the premises. That part of the business, however, does not seem to interest the Review; Gen. Russell is a native southerner and a Republican—an offense for which the editor of that paper can never forgive him. If he were a Bourbon-like the glib editor of the Quincy Herald—our neighbor would have no criticism to offer.

THE London Lancet of July 30 says of the President's relapse of two weeks ago:

It is quite impossible to feel any certainty that we may not hear of another abscess—another relapse—and it is of great importance that the constitutional vigor should be maintained at as high a pitch as possible in view of future trouble. We can only repeat our former assertion that only when the patient is well will he be out of danger. The absence of fever and severe exhaustion removes any cause for immediate alarm, but until the wound is quite healed, and the bullet either removed or safely encysted, there will be liability to recurring abscesses, each attended with a certain risk of blood-poisoning.

BRADLAUGH was very seriously hurt in his encounter with the police while trying to reach his seat in the house of commons. He is now down with erysipelas, and is in a dangerous condition. The London News of August 2d, gives the following details of Mr. Bradlaugh's ejection from the house of commons:

The bangers-on in the hall noticed through the doors a rush of members in the direction of the path of exit, which adjoins the carriage way to the house. There was a speedy rush out of the hall, and round to the door in Palace yard. Some thirty or forty members were already in the carriage way, waiting to see the ejection of their fellow member from the adjoining doorway. A moment afterward the now deathly pale face and writhing figure of that member appeared at the door. A policeman held him tightly by the right arm, a house official clutched him firmly on the left, policemen dragged him, policemen and messengers pushed him. Inspector Denning directed operations. This he did in a spirit tender and generous enough; but still force had to be employed to overcome resistance. It was a case of at least eight men against one, and the force in favor of ejection was aided by the pressure of members following the scene from behind. Yet the progress was slow. The strong, broad, bony, powerful frame of Mr. Bradlaugh was hard to move, with its every nerve and muscle strained to resist the coercion. Bending and striking against the overpowering numbers, he held every inch with surprising tenacity, and only surrendered it after almost superhuman exertions to retain it. The eight—little of it was seen from the outside—soon became sickening. The overborne man appeared almost at his last gasp. The face, in spite of the warmth of the struggle, had an ominous pallor. The limbs barely sustained him. It became slightly doubtful whether the police were not sustaining the heavy, exhausted frame, rather than any longer resisting its backward pressure. The trudging square phrase that this man might be broken and not bent occurred to minds apprehensive at the present appearance of him. The cheers and cries of "Bravo, Bradly! " "British pluck," with which the crowd had greeted him, gave way to cries of "Shame! " But the portals of the dead were soon crossed, and the struggle was over. Inspector Denning then sent for water for his breathless and almost fainting charge. In the water Mr. Bradlaugh dipped his handkerchief and cooled his temples after his great exertions.

REGARDING THE ELECTION OF ILLINOIS COUNTY OFFICERS.

Chicago Legal News, Aug. 16. There has been much written and said in legal circles as to the effect of the late amendment to the constitution and the law which provided for an election this fall for certain county officers. It is claimed by some that there must be an election in November for these officers, notwithstanding the amendments to the constitution and changes in the law. Others maintain that there is to be no election, and that this is a case not provided for, and that the 1st Monday of December comes, the time when the terms of these judges would expire in accordance with the old provision of the constitution, these offices will be vacant and the governor can then appoint judges to fill the vacancies as the term will then be less than a year. The third position, and which we believe to be correct, is that there can be no election for these officers until the time named in the amendment to the constitution, which is in November, 1862, and that the officers hold until that time, as the constitution provides that their terms shall be four years and until their successors are elected and qualified.

The change has been made in the time of holding the election by the people in their sovereign capacity, by an amendment to the constitution, and not by the legislature. The people have the power to extend the terms of officers, or to abolish them even before the term expire. This amendment was proclaimed adopted by the governor, on November 22, 1860. The people voted for this constitutional amendment under a law which declared it should become a part of the constitution from the time it was declared adopted by the board of canvassers—Sec. 7, page 132, Rund's Statutes, 1860.

Old Section 8 of Article 10 of the constitution was then, on the 22d day of November, by the power of the people, taken out of the constitution, and the new Section 8 adopted by them, providing for the election in 1862, was put in its place. The legislature, to carry out this provision of the constitution, amended the law so as to make it read that the election should be in 1862, when law went in force July 1. The question suggests itself, how can we have an election for these officers in November, 1861, with no provision in the constitution or the statute for such an election at that time? The wire-pullers are hard at work preparing for conventions and declaring that they will have an election and run full tickets for these officers. Governor Collens has, in answer to a letter written by an officer, given it as his opinion that under the amendment the election is to be in 1862.

All action that looks toward our having two or three sets of county officers in this state is to be impeded. There are several ways by which this matter can be brought before the supreme court and a decision obtained before November. The governor has in one of the counties of the state, we think it was Peoria, appointed, a few weeks ago, a county judge to fill the vacancy. If the judge whose vacancy this new appointee filled, would have held under the amendment to the constitution until November, 1862, then the term beginning for more than a year, the governor had no authority to fill the vacancy, but should have called an election. It would seem that a writ of quo warranto might be brought against this county judge, for him to show by what authority he now holds the office, and by entering appearance and waiving time, etc., the case could be got into the supreme court, and a certain decision reached in time, or perhaps in view of the importance of the public interests involved if a mandamus was brought against the governor in the supreme court to compel him to call an election to fill the vacancy which he had attempted to fill by appointment, and he was to answer, enter his appearance, waive the question of jurisdiction and ask the court to give an opinion on the case, that they would. At least it would be in the discretion of the court to do so.

In making this appointment, the governor being of the opinion that under this section of the constitution the election is not to be held till next year, must also be of the opinion that in December the terms of all the county judges in the state will expire, and their offices become vacant, and that he can fill them by appointment. Once conceded that there is to be no election this fall, then the appointment of this county judge can only be justified upon the ground that all these offices will be vacant this fall and such vacancies can be filled by the governor. There are a number of good lawyers in the state who are of this opinion; we, however, do not believe this to be the law.

The supreme court meets at Ottawa next month, and it is to be expected that the attorney general will have the case, in some form, presented to the court.

EX-TREASURER SPINNER politely but firmly declines to be a candidate for congress to fill the vacancy created by the election of Mr. Miller to the senate. The ex-treasurer is living in Florida, and desires "to be left in the retirement for which for so many years he longed, and which he now so much enjoys."

A Testament Reviewer's Opinion. The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kennedy, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the New Testament, in general conversation with a number of gentle men, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

AN ELOQUENT TRIBUTE.

Chicago Legal News, Aug. 16. Among all the noble tributes which have been paid to our wounded and suffering president since he was shot, there has been none that we have seen more eloquent and inspiring than that contained in the following response to a toast in honor of the president of the United States, delivered by Hon. Thos. B. Reed, of Maine, at a military reception in Portland last week:

It is easy enough to speak to the toast you have read. It is easier by far than at any time since this country began. Hitherto when we named the president of the United States we were, whether we would or no, reminded that we were divided into parties discordant and disunited. To-night on this theme all parties are one, one in their sorrows and fears, one in their hopes and bright anticipations. Men are curiously qualified. We all praise the eye and always follow the heart. To see a strong man struggling to climb the steep where fame's proud temple shines afar stirs the soul like the drum beat or the strains of martial music. But the drum beat and the strains of martial music die away in ever widening circles of empty air. Whoever challenges the admiration only of mankind vanishes as surely as the purple sunset steals away from the shifting clouds. Whoever by suffering is wedded to human hearts hath a boundless and everlasting empire. Thousands have listened to the rich and ornate eloquence of Garfield, to whom in a few years his splendid presence would have been an unimportant memory. Of the fifty millions of men, women and children who have sat beside that patient couch, who have day by day watched the beat of that feverish pulse, not one will ever remember him except with softened heart and tender hope. If he is to be spared to us he will come back with power—struck down in tears and sorrow—he will be raised in joy and hope. He will come back to us with no rival among the living, with no peer except among the dead. And fifty millions of people good and true hope and believe that he will bring back from the inner gates of death something better than life, the wisdom and the power to do for this nation what in the light of all future history shall prove to be worthy of his brave and struggling youth, his toilsome and victorious manhood, and of a benevolent and honored old age.

A Bostonian Mistake

Boston Transcript.

At a late Boston party the host said to a guest: "I beg you to entertain Mr. Blank a little; he looks utterly forlorn and bored to death. I will introduce him and you must interest him. By the way, his strong point is butter, on which he has written a book." The lady guest graciously undertook the task of entertaining the man, inwardly wondering that he should be so much interested in butter (of which she knew very little) when his face indicated a mind given to much profound thinking. However, with butter in view, she began on the weather, gradually got to the country, then onto a farm, from that to cows, and at last to butter. The man looked more bored than ever, the magic word producing not the slightest effect, and he somewhat abruptly left her and soon withdrew from the house. "I did my best," she explained to the hostess; "I went through agonies to prove that I was deeply interested in butter, but it was all in vain!" "Butter!" exclaimed the hostess, "what possessed you to talk to that man of all men on butter! I told you he had just written a book on Buddha, and I knew how deeply you, too, were interested in the same subject!" And they said in a chorus, "Gracious!"

The following cablegram was sent to-night:

LOWELL, MINISTER, LONDON: Since noon slight rise in temperature; has vomited but once during afternoon. Nourished by enema retained. Pulse at 7 p. m., 126; temperature, 96.3; respiration, 19. His condition on the whole is rather better than yesterday.

HILL, Acting Secretary.

Dr. Hamilton arrived at 10:20 p. m.

He was met at the depot by Dr. Bliss, who stated to him the condition of the president at this time and gave an outline history of the case since the last visit of the New York surgeon.

After hearing this Dr. Hamilton decided to go directly to the residence of Attorney General MacVeagh and not disturb the president to-night. Dr. Bliss returned to the executive mansion, and subsequently stated that he regarded the condition of the president as more hopeful than when the last bulletin was issued. An enema had given strength, and was apparently doing the president good. His pulse had receded to 114, with respiration and temperature normal.

He said that at every dressing there was found an area of granulation of the wound that in view of the weak condition of the patient was astonishing. The president rests comfortably and is being given broken ice at intervals of sleep, which his stomach receives kindly and retains. There has been no vomiting since the afternoon, and Dr. Bliss expects that the stomach will be in a condition to receive food in the morning, and expresses a confidence that the morning bullet will be of such a nature as to revive the hope of the community. He says a crisis has been bridged over and the case is much more hopeful at this hour.

STATE Secretary Housum informs us that the applications for blanks to make entries for the coming state firemen's tournament at Quincy, are coming in rapidly.
The prospects for a large and interesting gathering of red-jackets to compete for the prizes are very good. Yesterday a letter was received from Thos.
Bowman, of the Reson of Council Bluffs, Iowa, entering that team for the sweepstakes prize, and to-day the Res-on of Decatur will be formally entered and the papers filed with the secretary.
The talk of another challenge contest between the Council Bluffs and Decatur Reson seems to be dying out, as the Bluffers have no doubt concluded that they are unable to get away with our boys. Mr. Bowman writes that his team is making good time, that they have changed their couplers and expect to get time inside of 40 seconds at Quincy.
Nothing like faith to keep a body of vanquished men together. If they can make the run in 40 the Decatur Reson can take the whole trophy—perhaps.

SAMUEL PARKINS, aged about 60 years, met with a serious accident at Joe Tait's farm, two miles north of Decatur, Monday evening. He was at work in a ditch about eight feet deep, in which he intended to lay tiles, when the earth caved in, nearly smothering the old gentleman.
Fortunately a boy was close at hand. He gave the alarm and brought men to the spot, who rescued Perkins from his horrible situation. When taken out it was found that Mr. Perkins' right collar bone was broken and that he had received other injuries of a serious nature. He was reported resting comfortably to-day.

NOAH ESTILE, the drayman who was struck on the head with stove leg by John Miller, and severely injured, was able to appear upon the streets this morning. His head still pains him considerably, and he is not yet able to resume work. Mr. Estile says that he may have struck Miller first, but only lightly, to prevent him from removing the stove from the dray. He thought that Miller had hidden it in his pocket, and from his action Estile imagined that he was in danger of bodily injury. He has received a good pay for leaving the Camper goods, $1.50, the price demanded.

THE funeral of the late John W.

He joined Celestial Lodge of Odd Fellows also a member of Eldorado Hose Co. No.

2, and the entire fire department will at-Catholic cemetery, near the fair grounds, yesterday. The child had been ill but a short time.

the last week of its present engagement at the Grand Opera House last evening with a fine audience in attendance. The more the "Mascotte" is seen and heard is particularly well qualified to illustrate the musical beauties, while the comedy exceedingly clever pieces of work.

JOE GULICK.

On Saturday evening, August 27th, the Joe Gulick combination will give us "Furnished Rooms." A Cincinnati journal gives the company the following notice:

THE handsome opera house that Manager Heuck presides over was opened for the season last evening, and the house was packed to the walls, the first attraction being the Joe Gulick combination in the new farcical comedy called "Furnished Rooms." The play proved a success and met with a most hearty reception, but on account of the crowded condition of our columns we will not be able to give it a just and fair notice until a later date, the comedy being the attraction for the entire present week, and it looks as if the success of last night would make thousands apply for "Furnished Rooms" at Heuck's during that time.
A concert, with a fine programme, is announced for this afternoon and evening.

of making their home at Lima, the capital. Mrs. Moore has been engaged to write long letters occasionally for publication in the Chicago Times. Her first contribution has been forwarded and will probably appear in the Times one day this week, possibly not before Saturday.
